The College of Letters and Science serves nearly every student who comes to UC Davis, providing each of them with a broad base of knowledge and a fundamental understanding of our world. It is critical that we are able to respond quickly to an ever-changing world by creating new majors and classes, undertaking groundbreaking research and developing innovative teaching methods. Many of our major areas of study intersect across disciplines and foster strong relationships which benefit members of both the campus and local communities.

We share founding Dean Young’s commitment to fulfill the needs of students and honor him with the name of our giving society. In an age where state funding for higher education is dwindling, our future depends on you. As a member of the Herbert A. Young Society, you will help us continue to offer limitless opportunities for the next generation—providing students with a world class education. Together, we can make a difference.

“A lot of people in my parents’ generation sacrificed to create the UC education I received. Giving something now is my way of paying them back by helping make a great education available to another generation.”
